NYÍREGYHÁZA

Mihály Váci, a famous native of the town, described Nyíregyháza as: “...not a historic town. Its name is not linked with battles or peace treaties, it does not have a large number of historic sights, ancient monuments with royal footsteps...”. But its beauty and atmosphere captures visitors, nevertheless.

By summing up the town’s history in a nutshell it can be said, that according to archaeological finds, the area of the town has been inhabited since the 10th century. In spite of this, it is still considered as a relatively young settlement, as the real changes took place during the 18th century. Slovakian settlers (also called ‘tírpáks’) arrived in 1753 and lived on the so-called ‘bush farms’ around the town, establishing a peculiar settlement framework. The most important event in the lives of the Nyíregyháza citizens was redeeming their complete freedom from the landowner’s rule in 1824. As a result, in 1837 Nyíregyháza was awarded a town status. Today an atmospheric and nice town with a bubbly life greets the visitors. Parks, squares, large green spaces, modern and old buildings shape the town’s look, which managed to keep its old, intimate feel.

We start our stroll in Kossuth tér, the main square of the town. The most characteristic building of the square is the Town Hall (1), which was designed by Károly Benkó. The eclectic building, which has a renaissance atmosphere and pillared entrance, was built in 1872. The infamous ‘Tiszszlár Court Case’ took place in the building’s Ceremonial Hall, which has also been visited by Károly Eötvös and Kálmán Mikszáth. Zsigmond Móricz lived in the adjoining guest room for a while. Above the balcony facing the square, there are two Justitia statues on each end of the façade. The Lajos Kossuth Memorial, sculpted by Gyula Bethlen, is in the middle of the square. On the back of the statue a broken gun barrel can be seen, with a bird perched on it and the date 1848 inscribed underneath. The Memorial Column to Complete Freedom from Landowner Rule stands in the shade of old chestnut trees. On its left side there are hard, sceptical peasant faces, while on the right there are faces of hopeful peasants. “Nyíregyháza is no longer indebted to a landowner or under their rule.”

The decorative paving of Kossuth tér symbolises the Solar System with its nine circular mosaics, capturing the planets. Further on from the square is the eclectic building of the Takarékpalota (Savings Palace) (2), built in 1912 based on the design of József Hubert. Its listed cashiers’ hall is covered with a stained-glass dome. Opposite is another eclectic building of the town from the end of the 19th century, the Hotel Korona (3), built in 1895, according to Ignác Alpár’s plans. It has three street-facing sides, which all look different. An interesting fact is that electric lamps were turned on for the first time in Nyíregyháza on the night of the hotel’s opening ball. Next to the hotel the Roman Catholic Church (4) soars high, which was built by Virgil Nagy in 1902-1904. The church has a nave and two aisles, imitating cathedrals. Its most beautiful part is the monumental cross-nave. This is where the marble pulpit can be found, which is decorated with the relief figures of the four evangelists. Next door to the church is the Episcopal See of the Debrecen-Nyíregyháza Roman Catholic Diocese.

As we continue our stroll along Zrínyi Ilona utca, two nice buildings come into our view. One is the neo-baroque Catholic Palace (5) and the other the former Roman Catholic Rectory (6). Between them, the decorative fountain called Three Ladies; a bronze statue of three bathing girls, by Tibor Borbás draws attention. Further down the street is a secessionist palace, which now serves as the town's Registry Office (7). Anyone who's been here will never forget the little street's atmosphere and colourful mixture. From Spring till Autumn the many flowers and shrubs ooze a Mediterranean atmosphere and passers-by can enjoy the street musicians' playing by the statue of the bronze girls.

When looking towards Bocskai utca, one can see the empire-style building of the County Court (8), with the recently inaugurated Public Prosecutors' Office (9), next to it.

Nearby, Szabadság tér is the centre of the town's cultural life. The Móricz Zsigmond County Library (10) can be found here, together with the interestingly shaped building of the Váci Mihály Cultural Centre (11) designed by Ferenc Bán. The blue building of the Town Gallery (12) is just across the road from the above Culture Centre. The Gallery hosts the permanent exhibition of the 'Sóstó Medal Arts Creative Workshop', as well as temporary fine arts exhibitions. Next to the Gallery is the new building of the Kodály Zoltán Primary School (13). The school has a modern concert hall with good acoustics, where the world-famous 'Cantemus' choir practices and performs. The Pál Gyula Hall (14) is also part of the school-building complex, where temporary exhibitions can be seen. The Continental Arena Sports Centre (14) is just a short walk away. It's a venue for many high-ranking sports competitions. Fairs and exhibitions also fill the hall throughout the year. The area lying behind the Leisure Complex is called the Bujtos, which used to be the place for fighting duels, as described by the writer Gyula Krúdy, in his works. However, nowadays, most of this swampy area has been drained and a leisure park was established.

Back towards the town centre, opposite the Savings Palace (Takarékpalota), is the statue of the Town's Founders, which was inaugurated in 2001. The statue, sculpted by Benedek Nagy, is of Count Ferenc Károlyi and János Petrikovics, a boot-maker from Szarvas, who both played important roles in re-settling the almost uninhabited town in 1753. At Hősök tere the imposing building of the County Hall (15) can be found, built in eclectic style, also the work of Ignác Alpár. There are two niches in the building's façade, each containing a statue, works of art by Ede Kallós. One of them depicts Chief Szabolcs and the other King Stephen I. In the decorative courtyard the statues of two former prime ministers can be found, Count Menyhért Lónyay (1871-71) and Miklós Kállay (1942-44), natives of the county. The park in front of the County Hall is dominated by Zsigmond Kisfaludy Stróbl's 1928 WWI Memorial. Its main figure is the hero fighting a dragon, while the two side figures depict leaving for the battlefields at the end. The statue of the Dragon Killer, which can be seen on top of Gellért Hill in Budapest, is a copy of the Nyíregyháza statue, with slight variations. On the opposite side of the square is sculptor Sándor Györfi's 1956 Memorial, which was erected in 2006.

In Október 23 tér is a chrome-steel statue depicting a female figure by Béla Tilles, called Tree of Life, symbolising the intertwining past and present, as well as hope for the future. There is another statue here, by Lajos Orr, a bronze drinking fountain depicting a cockerel.

The Orthodox Synagogue (16) is in nearby Síputca, which was built between 1924-32 based on Lipót Baumhorn's plans. Not far from here is the characteristic red-brick building of the St. Atanáz Greek Catholic Theological College (17), which moved into its new premises in 2003.

Towards the town centre is Bethlen Gábor utca, with the twin-spired Greek Catholic Church (18) on the corner. It was built in 1895 in a mixed Byzantine style. There is a little passage behind the church, where the fountain-statue of St. Nicholas, the church's patron saint can be found. The passage is named after him and the statue was sculpted in 1996 by Sándor Tóth.

The domineering building in Kálvin tér is the romantic Reformed Church, built between 1873 and 1882.

Országzászló tér follows on from Kálvin tér, where a Memorial stands to the Victims and Martyrs of WWII. It was unveiled in 1991 by former Prime Minister József Antall. At the southern part of the square a bronze horseman's statue draws your attention, called 'The Hungarian Hussar'. Hussars have been a part of the town's life since 1869, when a small cavalry regiment of the Hungarian Royal Army moved into the town's barracks. In 1891 larger barracks were built, able to accommodate a whole regiment. Until WWII Hussars played an important role in the town's economic and social life. The former Nyírvíz Palota (20), a secessionist corner building, which dominates the town's look, can be seen from the square. There are two mosaics depicting ancient occupations on the roof's façade: one depicts fishing and hunting, the other symbolises farming.

The bronze statue of György Bessenyei, writer, philosopher and Queen Marie Therese's bodyguard can be found in Bessenyei tér. It was sculpted by Ede Kallós in neo-baroque style and it was the town's first statue in a public square. The eclectic building of the Móricz Zsigmond Színház (Theatre) (21) is in idyllic surroundings. It was designed by Ignác Alpár and built in 1894. Its external façade is decorated with reliefs of Molière, Szigligeti and Shakespeare. Every year the theatre organises the VIDOR Festival, which is one of country's largest all-encompassing arts festivals. Opposite the theatre the statues of Mihály Váci (made by István Szabó in 1976) and Gyula Krúdy (made by Imre Varga in 2003) commemorate the town's famous natives.

Just across the road in Benczúr tér, is the monumental, neo-classicist building of the Jósza András Múzeum (Museum)(22). It was named after the famous scientist and polymath. The interior renovations of the museum were completely finished by Spring 2008 and it now hosts a rich selection of Nyíregyháza and the county's relics. The permanent exhibitions include archaeological, ethnographic and fine arts collections, as well as a vault room, with the golden treasures from Újfehértó. There are also valuable temporary exhibitions. The limestone statue of Gyula Benczúr, a painter born in Nyíregyháza, can be seen just outside the museum. It was sculpted by Géza Fekete Galántai. Behind the statue, on the base of a fountain, in the shade of trees is the famous statue 'The Birth of Venus' by Zsigmond Kisfaludy Stróbl. It is an interesting statue, as the original, which won a gold medal at the Barcelona EXPO in 1929, is now in Santa Barbara, California. This exact copy was presented to the town by the artist. The neat pavilion in the middle of the square has been recently renovated. It was built in 1925 and used to be a summer cake shop and café with music, then later a beer garden.

Walking towards Iskola utca, we get to Luther tér and the Lutheran Church (23). It's a listed building in baroque style. The Slovaks who were settled here in 1753 began to build their first stone church after the edict of tolerance was issued by Joseph II. It was designed by the Italian Giuseppe Aprilis and it was consecrated in 1786, on the highest point of the town. The church fulfils an important role in the music life of Nyíregyháza, as it hosts organ and choir concerts. A carillon on the façade of the building reminds people of the passing of time.

Next to the church is the so-called Luther-ház (house) (24), which consists of two buildings. They used to be rented for accommodation and offices by the Lutheran Church. The building was completed in 1928 based on the plans of architect István Kotsis and it was the town's most modern apartment building.

Just a few steps away from the Luther-ház at 8 Szent István utca, there is a memorial plaque on the house's wall, indicating that this is where the famous writer and journalist Gyula Krúdy's birth house (25) used to be, (born in 1878). The Nyíregyháza Lutheran Kossuth Lajos Grammar School (26) can also be found in this street, which was the first grammar school in the county. It was established by the Lutheran Church in 1806 and it became a grammar school in 1861. Among its students were Gyula Krúdy (writer), János Kabay (chemist-research scientist) and Béla Gádor (writer, journalist).

On the way to Sóstógyógyfürdő, the road goes past the Tuzson János Botanical Garden (27), embraced by the Sóstó Forest. Special plants typical of the county can be seen here, as well as a rock garden, a lake and collections of plants from tropical, subtropical, Mediterranean and desert regions.

Young and old all love the erdei tornapálya (forest adventure trail) in the Sóstó Woods, where, besides the playground, nature trails and bike paths await people wishing to relax.

Sóstógyógyfürdő is only 6km from the town centre and is famous for its medicinal spa, which was built by the edge of the oak forest surrounding the town, around a saline lake. The lake is suitable for swimming, as well as other recreational activities, including hiring a boat or pedalo and fishing. The Állatpark (Zoo) (1) is a must-see. The zoo occupies a 35-hectare wooded area, where five thousand different animals from 300 species, from the five continents live in natural surroundings. The African Scene is inhabited, among others, by giraffes, zebras, and lions. Australia is represented by kangaroos, while seals have arrived from the Arctic regions. There is also a tropical bird house, there are bears, wolves, buffalo, monkeys and an original Hungarian peasant farmyard, too. The latest attraction of the Zoo are the so-called "Victoria House" for animals from South America, Africa, Asia and Australia and the 'World of Andes' together with spectacular outer runway system and indoor placements for wintertime.

Further on from the zoo, visitors will reach a nicely carved Transylvanian gate. This is the centre of Sóstó. The Krúdy Szálló (hotel) used to be the centre of the spa's social life and the scene of huge parties. Krúdy himself, who professed to love Sóstó, spent a lot of time here. The building was renovated by Summer 2003. Also worth seeing is the Víztorony (Water tower) (3), which is a listed industrial building from 1911. In summer the Tourinform office is run from the water tower. Behind it is the Svájci-lak (Swiss Cottage) (4) built in 1866, which got its name from the alpine style it was built in. Lujza Blaha, 'the nightingale of the nation' often used to be a guest here, as the memorial plaque states. Nowadays the cottage operates as a hotel again. Nearby is the early 19th century Hotel Fürdőház (Hotel Bathing House) (5), which await visitors every day of the week with thermal pools, medicinal massages, Jacuzzi and sauna. Upstairs there is accommodation for visitors. Sóstógyógyfürdő's latest attraction is the Medical Centre in the Aquarius Élményfürdő (Adventure Pool Complex) (6). It is open throughout the year, offering a refreshing experience to the whole family with the adventure, thermal and children's pools, as well as saunas. The medicinal bath treatment is a brilliant opportunity for the treatment of rheumatic and other musculoskeletal diseases, where besides the effect of clear water we can count upon the absorption of minerals and ions (iodine, bromine, sodium chloride, etc.) and a further complex physiotherapeutic effect.

Turning off Sóstói út to the left leads to the Múzeumfalv (Open-air Museum Village) (7), which was opened in 1979. The museum exhibits and preserves the colourful folk architecture of the Northern Trans-Tisza region. A shopkeeper works in the grocery store from the beginning of the 20th century, drinks are served in the old pub and there is a shoe-maker and a hatter in the small craft shop. In summer there are many different programmes for the visitors: concerts, old folk festivities and tasting of regional dishes. Further along the main road, at the end of the bus route is the Parkfürdő (Park Swimming Pool Complex) (8). Pools with warm and cold water, slides, sports opportunities and a racing pool tempt those, who wish to cool down. The iodine-bromide pool and water is excellent for locomotor diseases, joints pains, gynaecological illnesses, but can also be drunk therapeutically. Those who prefer natural water can have a swim in the nearby Tófürdő (Lake Lido) (9).

Visitors tired from sightseeing in the town or refreshed from their swim have a wide choice of accommodation in Sóstó, as all categories from campsites to hotels can be found here.

We have now reached the end of our stroll and hope that you have also taken our town into your heart.

TRANSPORT

BUSES

There are 24 bus lines in Nyíregyháza with regular service and there are 5 lines that serve the outlying bush-farms.

The railway station and its environs are the busiest areas, as this is where the bus station is, as well as many routes' final stops. Those who wish to get to the town centre or Sóstógyógyfürdő from here need to remember the number 8. The two ends of this line are the railway station and the Sóstó Park Swimming Pool Complex.

It is important to remember, that you can only travel with a ticket or pass bought in advance. People may only get on the bus at the first door, as this is where tickets need to be validated. Tickets can also be bought from the bus drivers, but it is slightly more expensive than if it had been bought in advance.

Those travelling between 8am and 1pm travel cheaper. The saver tickets can be used for journeys, which began after 8am and finish before 1pm. The discount is only valid with tickets bought in advance.

For those staying in Nyíregyháza longer, there are day tickets, weekly passes valid for one line, as well as passes valid for all the lines.

Máriapócs:

is one of Hungary's most famous pilgrimage places. It was established as a place of pilgrimage thanks to the 'Weeping Mary' picture, which can be found in the Greek Catholic Church. On 18th August 1991 Pope John Paul II visited the church and held a saint liturgy in front of the sacred picture.

Nyírbátor:

is the ancient seat of the Báthori family. There is a Gothic Reformed Church in this town, which was built in 1488-1511 on the orders of Báthori István, Transylvanian prince. Not far from the church, in the former Báthori Castle there is a waxworks exhibition, containing 45 historic figures. The vaulted ceiling of the church creates excellent acoustics, so it is one of the venues of the Nyírbátor Music Days events. The Báthori István Museum is in the former Minorite monastery, next to the Roman Catholic Church. Many visitors are drawn here every year in June by the 'Winged Dragon' week-long street festival.

Vaja:

the golden age of the recently renovated Vay-castle was during the Rákóczi freedom fights. The castle now is a museum, presenting the life of the Vay family, furniture from the Rákóczi age and there is an exhibition about the events of the Rákóczi freedom fights.

Debrecen:

this town is 50 km from Nyíregyháza, the symbol of which is the classicist 'Református Nagytemplom' (Reformed Church). Among other things, the Déri Museum is worth mentioning, which exhibits Mihály Munkácsy's 'Christ Trilogy'. The 'Református Kollégium' (Reformed Grammar School) has been going since 1538 and it has a vast library, called 'Kollégium Nagykönyvtára'. The town hosts the Flower Festival as well as many other cultural and musical events.

Nagykálló-Harangod:

there is a rowing lake embraced by woods and it is a much loved excursion destination. Year in, year out Hungarian folk dancers meet here as the guests of the TÉKA (arts and crafts) camp.

Tokaj:

this town lies at the confluence of the rivers Tisza and Bodrog and became world-famous for its wine. Tokaj is the central settlement of the Tokaj - Hegyalja Wine Region, which is a World Heritage site. The history of the town together with old wine making and vine-growing tools can be seen in the Tokaj Museum.
